

Call for Submission of Contributions

During the last decade particular competency and knowledge in all aspects of e-learning have been developed in many national and international projects and programs. To maintain, distribute and evolve this knowledge, a new electronic journal has been launched in February 2005. You will find the current issue at:

http://eleed.campussource.de/Aktuelle Ausgabe

The journal is published by FernUniversität Hagen and the open source project, CampusSource.

This electronic journal covers all aspects of e-learning including:

- Best practice reports addressing all kinds of educational and vocational settings.
- Innovative didactic and pedagogical models and scenarios.
- Novel software infrastructure solutions including e-learning platforms, tools, and reusable content modules.

“e-learning and education” is an archival, peer-reviewed technical journal that will appear continuously and publishes the following types of contributions:

- Research papers
- Reports on case studies
- Survey articles
- e-learning standards and proposals
- Reports on major e-learning projects
- Book and product presentations or discussions
- Dissertations

Besides providing a forum for researchers and practitioners in the field, “e-learning and education” aims to support cooperation and community building and foster open e-learning standards. The journal also strives to maintain an international balance by relying on experts from various corners of the world.

All accepted contributions will be published under the open publishing license:

Contributions may be submitted at any times to:

eleed@campussource.de

Contributions should be submitted in German or English. Contributions that are accepted will be published in both English and German. Hence bi-lingual submissions are particularly welcome. Further information can be found at:
